Having been granted by the Town a somewhat larger sum than usual for Library purposes, we have made an effort to increase our circulation by establishing branches in the East and West Districts of the Town. This we feel has been to a considerable degree, a success. Supplying those who desire reading matter, with less inconvenience than formerly We desire to call attention to the fact that the Mass. Agricultural College has adopted a plan which it calls Library Extension Work.

The proposition is to send, upon request, to the smaller libraries, as a loan, collections of books treating of Agriculture of Rural Life and the betterment of Social affairs in Country places.

We have already a few of these books for circulation.

We have found the magazine department to be popular with the reading public and have materially enlarged our list of magazines and periodicals.

We append hereto a complete list of books purchased during the year.

Report of School Committee

The School Committee submit the following report:

Last spring the hot water system at the Center School house froze and as repairing it would be quite expensive we concluded to put in a supplementary steam plant instead. This has proved quite satisfactory both in heating the school rooms and economy of coal consumption. By the efforts of teachers and scholars, a bell was purchased and put in the belfry.

The Superintendent's report covers the work done in the class rooms.

Superintendent's Report

To the School Committee of the Town of Whately:

Gentlemen—I have the honor to submit herewith my third annual report.

The past decade has been a period of transition in education in the United States.

The needs of the individual pupil are being considered and as a result we have been obliged to pass from traditional to rational methods in education. The effort of present educational reformers is to make the period of school life count for something definite not only in the various school activities but also in the after life of the pupil. A small per cent only of pupils in the grade schools ever enter the high school. Clearly the work of the grades is to prepare as far as possible for life, not merely for higher education. The enrichment of the curriculum has this object in view. In addition to improved methods in practical arts—reading, writing and arithmetic—the want has long been felt for something that will in a measure furnish this life preparation.

The training of the muscles of the hand to make them respond quickly and intelligently to the stimuli of the brain is necessary to avoid a one-sided development. Hence the great activity in manual training. That the influence of the school may be felt in the home, and that home customs may be fashioned by the instruction of the school room is the concern of the present educational commission. An extra effort is being made to improve the rural school and to increase its usefulness, a special agent having recently been appointed to investigate rural school conditions and to suggest methods for their improvement.

Industrial and domestic science work already well developed in many of schools of the state, will in all probability be the first addition in this problem of enriching the curriculum.

In reviewing the work of the past three years we must admit that outside of the work of drawing and music we have been confining ourselves rather closely to the practical arts, reading, writing and arithmetic. These subjects deserve a large amount of attention but are no longer to be pursued to the exclusion of everything else. When the curricula of schools have been enriched by the addition of many of the newer branches of instruction, the work in the practical arts has not suffered. To meet the demands of present day methods we must include in our school work sewing and cooking, if we are to endeavor to increase from year to year the efficiency of our school system, and if we are to take advantage of modern methods and subjects. These two subjects offer a greater opportunity than many of the other more recent additions to school curricula, for enriching the work of the school, for making the school life count for something definite, and for extending the influence of school instructions to the home.

A supervisor of domestic science would be a very practical addition to our corps of teachers for next year.

A course in practical science and nature study has been placed in the hands of the teachers together with suitable reference books. This course will be introduced beginning with the Spring term, and will provide some garden work along with nature study. In connection with gardening, I wish to call your attention to the plan of the Massachusetts Agricultural College given on another page of the report. The extension work of our State College is thoroughly practical and I hope that a large number of the pupil will avail themselves of the opportunity offered to do scientific work in agriculture, as well as to become interested in one of the several contests.

The playground experiment is working well. It is sufficiently successful to warrant an increase in equipment for the coming year.

It is with regret that I report the resignation of Miss Mirfield in the primary department of the center school. She has given unsparingly of her time and energy for the welfare of the pupils and has been very successful in her work with them.

The record of the town for attendance is not an enviable one. The percentage of attendance last year was 88.69 per cent., and for the first five months of this year 89.96 per cent. The reason for this low average has not been sickness but the tendency on the part of some of the parents to keep their children out to work. There are numerous cases of absence for which the parents might be called to account by law. It is the intention of the committee this year to enforce strictly the law relative to attendance at school which follows:

[Revised Laws, Chapter 44.]

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

ATTENDANCE COMPULSORY BETWEEN SEVEN AND FOURTEEN YEARS OF AGE, AND UNDER SIXTEEN IN CERTAIN CASES.

SECTION 1. (As amended by chapter 320, Acts of 1905, and chapter 383, Acts of 1906.) Every child between seven and fourteen years of age, and every child under sixteen years of age who cannot read at sight and write legible simple sentences in the English language, shall attend some public day school in the city or town in which he resides during the entire time the public day schools are in session, subject to such exceptions as to children, places of attendance and schools as are provided for in section three of chapter forty-two and sections three, five and six of this chapter. The superintendent of schools or, if there is no superintendent of schools, the school committee, or teachers acting under authority of said superintendent or committee, may excuse cases of necessary absence. The attendance of a child upon a public day school shall not be required if he has attended for a like period of time a private day school approved by the school committee of such city or town in accordance with the provisions of the following section, or if he has been otherwise instructed for a like period of time in the branches of learning required by law to be taught in the public schools, or if he has already acquired such branches of learning, or if his physical or mental condition is such as to render such attendance inexpedient or impracticable. Every person having under his control a child as described in this section shall cause him to attend school as herein required; and if he fails for five day sessions or ten half day sessions within any period of six months while under such control to cause such child, whose physical or mental condition is not such as to render his attendance at school harmful or impracticable, so to attend school, he shall, upon complaint by a truant officer and conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than twenty dollars: provided, however, that no physical or mental condition which is capable of correction, or which renders the child a fit subject for special instruction at public charge in institutions other than the public day schools, shall avail as a defence under the provisions of this section unless it shall be made to appear that the defendant has employed all reasonable measures for the correction of the condition, or the suitable instruction of the child. Whoever induces or attempts to induce a child to absent himself unlawfully from school, or employs or harbors a child who, while school is in session, is absent unlawfully from school shall be punished by a fine of not more than fifty dollars.

In conclusion, I wish to call attention to the reports of the Supervisor of Music, and of Drawing which follows, and to express my appreciation of the courtesy and co-operation of the committee, teachers, pupils and parents.

Respectfully submitted,

CHESTER D. STILES,

Superintendent.

Respectfully submitted,

BELLE BULLIS,

Supt. Music,

Report of Art Supervisor

To Mr. C. D. Stiles, Superintendent of Schools:

The work in drawing of this year has been carried along the same lines as formerly.

In the lower grades an appreciation of things surrounding the pupils and belonging to their environment has been developed with the possibility of placing on paper their own ideas in a true representative manner. It is necessary that problems be kept simple in order to have them interesting and successful but at the same time a foundation is laid for the more advanced work of the older pupils.

The principles of perspective and application of the same are brought before the pupils of the upper grades and an ability to represent in a true pictorial manner common objects surrounding one daily is developed.

The oldest pupils are drilled in this line to such an extent that in drawing an object or objects the idea of perspective and relation of parts is almost habitual, hence we are able to advance much farther in real art, pictorial, decorative and constructive.

It is my endeavor to introduce more of the constructive phase in art than formerly, such as basketry, weaving and bookbinding, to teach the children to appreciate good forms in construction, the composing and application of original designs and an understanding of the making of ordinary objects about us.

Much better work has been done this year and a livelier interest and personal application has been manifested by the pupils and because of which it is my pleasure to express gratitude for the hearty co-operation and helpful interest taken by both teachers and superintendent.

Respectfully submitted,

BEATRICE J. HIBBARD,

Art Supervisor.
